An Average Attempt at Philosophy

Humans have wondered about the world since the dawn of time. From the ancient Greeks to modern-day scientists, people have sought to understand the meaning of life and the nature of reality. One such attempt is An Average Attempt at Philosophy, a show that explores the mysteries of human existence through a mix of philosophy, science, and personal anecdotes. Hosted by Dr. Roksi, Erik, and Jon, the show delves into the complexities of human thought and experience, challenging listeners to think critically about their own beliefs and perspectives.

The show takes place on WMBR Nightly News, and is broadcast from the '60s and early '70s, but not the same song(s) again and again and again. And again. WMBR is the first radio station in the world to broadcast in stereo, and it continues to be a leader in alternative and independent music.

In addition to exploring philosophical concepts, the show also features interviews with experts in the field, as well as a mix of music that complements the discussion. From classical music to contemporary hits, the show offers something for everyone who is interested in expanding their understanding of the world.

So whether you're a philosophy major or just someone who loves to think about big ideas, tune in to An Average Attempt at Philosophy and join the conversation. After all, there's no such thing as a stupid question.

WMBR is the Voice of COVID-19:

All our programs are being produced remotely, on a shoestring budget. We intend to stay on the air as long as we can, for as long as we are able. If you would like to help, send your contributions to WMBR, Dept. 2020, 3 Ames Street, Cambridge, MA 02142.

None of its members are paid for their efforts. Although some support comes from MIT, the majority of WMBR’s funding comes from listener donations. Only with the help of its listeners is WMBR able to provide its unique blend of music, talk, and news. If you would like to help, we invite you to contribute to WMBR.
